Iraq's military said the statement was "unfounded" and disputed the military's claim it had been ambushed. Kurdish authorities had said the attack was carried out by pro-Iranian militias. "Based on the lessons of the heroic and historic victory against Daesh, we have no reason to believe that Iran has supplied weapons to this gang and that the ambush was the result of coordination between Daesh and the enemies of Iraq and the region," the military said in a statement. [Iraqi prime minister orders counteroffensive against IS] "The statement of the news agency is unfounded and untrue," it added. Bassem Saed, spokesman for the Ahamdinejad Foundation, said the attack targeted a convoy that was not carrying the Iranian president but "was being escorted by American military equipment". It could be a "US-Iran coordination attempt" to create "reactions against Iran," he said. Iran has "always condemned and protested against the dirty practices of the American administration and the 3e33713323
