automotive mechanics n k giri pdf is there a way to modify auto class in pandas by function Okay, just use below code and a new function called compute_score will be inserted to your pandas code. just overwrite to where you normally compute the score - so for example before you import data from mysite and after the name is computed you can insert the line score = compute_score(df_clean) I also think there is a line for the mean. score should already be of type float. float just does not store numbers of infinite size so you will need to use float64. That's a lot of if statements and I recommend you think of whether it's really needed or not - just because a function is already defined does not mean it should be implemented. In the function itself, you may want to use try: except: handles the case where the mean is not defined. I think it's a best practice to always include them! EDIT: Here is code: def compute_score(clean_df, num_parts=4, duration_limit=12):
try: #Remove headers from your dataframe, if that's not possible you can use #df_clean = df[['id','make','model','year','trim','color']].reset_index(drop=True) clean_df.drop(['id','make','model','year','trim','color'],axis='columns',inplace=True) clean_df.to_csv('filename.csv',header=False) clean_df['id'] = clean_df['id'].astype('str') clean_df['make'] = clean_df['make'].astype('str') clean_df['model'] = clean_df['model'].astype('str') clean_df['year'] = clean_df['year'].astype('int') # clean_df['engine'] = clean_df['engine'].astype('int')
