That is, it is a glass made of imperfectly fused materials which can be described as a gel of crystallites or of a semi-crystalline material. It tends to be a much more translucent version of the flint glass. In terms of its chemical composition the most important difference between flint and opaline glass is the higher content of silica and alumina which give the flint glass its excellent chemical durability. The opaline glass are usually slightly bluer in colour than flint glass and, whilst it can be used for ordinary purposes, it can be far more difficult to work. In the 19th century when the opaline and flint glass were invented, the name opaline glass was applied to all these types of glass but now the term opaline is confined to glass made of flint-like compositions. The opaline glass is made from a mixture of silica, alumina, lime, lead oxide, sodium oxide and small amounts of cupric oxide and ferric oxide. These compounds are heated, in a furnace, to the softening point at which they fuse and are agitated during the cooling stage. Although rare opaline glass tend to be called "celadon" glass. The word "opaline" being associated with the Italian word "celadino" which means greenish-grey. History The first recorded use of the term opaline glass was in 1856 by L. É.A. Beaumont and

A new version of the Trojan'AdwCleaner'was published on June 15..Clinical practice guidelines: a perspective from dermatology. Clinical practice guidelines are intended to assist physicians and patients in making appropriate health decisions. Despite the need for a better understanding of their impact on patient care, the evidence base for this innovative intervention is still in its infancy. Quality improvement teams must be increasingly interested in what is happening with guidelines in our specialty, given that the goal of guidelines is to make best patient care the norm in health-care delivery systems. By its very nature, the dermatology of the future will be an area of integrative medicine, and health-care delivery systems will be making greater use of guidelines to set priorities. Guidelines will, therefore, be of utmost importance to the practice of dermatology and to dermatologic health-care delivery systems. Dermatologists should be on the front line in defining and promoting the use of clinical practice guidelines for patient care.--- author: - Lilli Perfetti - Marcello Riccio - Ioana Carpentier - Stefano Pinna - Federica Caccavale - Alessio Crosti - Pietro Graziosi bibliography: -'multipletag.bib' date: 'Received: date / Accepted: date' title: 'A reactive pipeline for the simulation of multiple MG events' --- Acknowledgements {#acknowledgements.unnumbered} ================= This research is partly supported by the PhD Fellowship for Marcello Riccio by the Italian Space Agency (ASI). --- name: Feature request about: Suggest an idea for this project title: '' labels: enhancement assignees: '' --- Is your feature request related to a problem?
